

Identifying Learning Styles to Improve Teaching Effectiveness

This course is designed to give the participant a foundational understanding of how various learning styles impact learning achievement. Several of the most significant learning theories will be spotlighted with particular focus on David Kolb's (1984) experiential learning model and learning styles inventory. Participants will identify their preferred learning style, preferred teaching style, and correlate these insights to the classroom setting. Participants will explore the idea of a "teaching around the circle" approach to classroom facilitation to maximize learning. Various teaching strategies and learning activity ideas will be included in the dialogue.
