

Writing Effective Test Items

This workshop is designed to give the participant a practical experience of writing test items in the cognitive learning domain. Types of items include multiple choice, true/false, matching, short answer, and essays. Associated topics related to test item writing will include the use of publisher-provided test generator items, the revised Bloom's Taxonomy educational objectives, and grading of test items. Much of the time spent in this workshop will be focused on writing and revising actual test items that are (or will be) part of continuing education the participant teaches. Participants who register for this workshop should bring with them several examples of test items as a foundation for learning.
