

CISM: Assisting Individuals in Crisis and Group Crisis Intervention Combination Course

Crisis intervention is sometimes called “emotional first-aid.” Crisis interventions are typically done individually (one-on-one) or in groups. The Assisting Individuals in Crisis program is designed to teach participants the fundamentals of individual intervention. The audience for this class includes emergency services, school personnel, industrial peer support personnel without formal training in mental health, and mental health professionals who desire to increase their knowledge of individual (one-on-one) crisis intervention techniques. The Group Crisis Intervention training program is designed to present core elements of a comprehensive, systematic, and multi-component crisis intervention curriculum. The Group Crisis Intervention course prepares participants to understand a wide range of crisis services including crisis management, victims education, significant other support services, on-scene support services, demobilizations after large scale traumatic, small group defusing, and Critical Incident Stress Debriefing (CISD). The need for follow-up services and referrals when necessary is also described. This unique combination course is an intensive crisis intervention training experience. Participants must attend all three days for successful course completion. This course meets the requirements of the International Critical Incident Stress Foundation.
